

DIARY OF THE WEEK

Daffodil Ball event producer Alison Silcoff (2nd L) with fundraisers (L to R) CAE president and CEO Robert Brown, Medisys president and CEO Sheldon Elman and Price-waterhouseCoopers' senior partner and CEO Chris Clark

(L to R) Marc Léroux and his wife, Desjardins Group president and CEO Monique, join BCE president and CEO George Cope and wife Tami

Brazilian model Rizia Moreira with steel magnate Herbert Black

Newly appointed Air Canada president and CEO Calin Rovinescu and his wife, Elaine

DISCO NIGHT FOR A CURE

Montreal's Windsor Station was transformed into a Boogie Wonderland on April 23 as Canada's corporate and cultural elite hustled to the country's largest cancer gala, the legendary Daffodil Ball. The disco-themed event had a Studio 54 vibe, with psychedelic-chic touches, including a Donna Summer-look-alike atop a trapeze and live performances by local disco icons such as Martin Stevens ("Love Is in the Air"). Raising more than $1 million for the Canadian Cancer Society, the night had guests "Staying Alive" into the wee hours. — JENNIFER CAMPBELL IN MONTREAL

Patrick Angéllil (stepson of Celine Dion) with wife Sophie Danis